

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

Short-Sellers From Sage Capital Management Say They Found a Bubble in Russia, U.S. Fund Accesses Authorities of Trying To Shed Its Assets

March 1, 2008 Wall Street Journal (online edition) New York, NY 10038 Apr 2008 4.8

Related Content

Short-Sellers From Sage Capital Management Say They Found a Bubble in Russia, U.S. Fund Accesses Authorities of Trying To Shed Its Assets

What You

SHORT-SELLERS FROM SAGE CAPITAL MANAGEMENT SAY THEY FOUND A BUBBLE IN RUSSIA, U.S. FUND ACCESSES AUTHORITIES OF TRYING TO SHED ITS ASSETS

The investment firm says it has found a bubble in Russia, U.S. fund access authorities of trying to shed its assets

A Russian investment firm says it has found a bubble in Russia, U.S. fund access authorities of trying to shed its assets

Short-sellers from Sage Capital Management say they found a bubble in Russia, U.S. fund access authorities of trying to shed its assets

Short-sellers from Sage Capital Management say they found a bubble in Russia, U.S. fund access authorities of trying to shed its assets

Short-sellers from Sage Capital Management say they found a bubble in Russia, U.S. fund access authorities of trying to shed its assets

Short-sellers from Sage Capital Management say they found a bubble in Russia, U.S. fund access authorities of trying to shed its assets

Short-sellers from Sage Capital Management say they found a bubble in Russia, U.S. fund access authorities of trying to shed its assets