

Browder lied that Magnitsky was convicted after his death

Under Russian law, families are allowed to request trials of deceased individuals for purpose of “rehabilitating” their reputations. Magnitsky’s family (with Browder promoting this) did that. Trial was held, Magnitsky found guilty, then cases dismissed because he was deceased.

Browder of course lied and said Magnitsky had been convicted posthumously. However, confronted with the truth, he admitted it was dismissed. Full testimony and excerpts.
