

TURKEY'S T

A CIA legacy lives on

BY LUCY KOMISAR

On November 3, a truck crashed into a Mercedes Benz in Susurluk, ninety miles south of Istanbul, and killed three Turkish passengers: a fugitive heroin smuggler and hitman, a former high-ranking police officer, and a former "Miss Cinema." The lone survivor was a rightwing member of parliament. In the car's trunk, police found a forged passport, police identification papers, ammunition, silencers, and machine guns.

Lucy Komisar, a New York journalist, is doing research about Turkey for a book on U.S. foreign policy and human rights in the 1970s and 1980s.